

First Nations that have declared opposition to proposed Enbridge tanker & pipeline project

British Columbia and Western Canada

Current to December 31 2011

This is a list of First Nations and First Nations political organizations that have publicly declared their opposition to the Enbridge tankers and pipelines project. In some cases different levels of government representing the same First Nation may have signed a declaration or otherwise publically communicated their opposition. All of these are listed below, however, counting individual First Nations who are part of larger tribal groups only once yields a total of over 130 'opposed First Nations'.

The main Indigenous-law-based declarations opposing the pipeline include the Coastal First Nations Declaration which bans tar sands tankers on the north coast (March 2010), the Save the Fraser Declaration banning tar sands pipelines and tankers in the Fraser watershed, and on the north and south coasts (signings in Nov/Dec 2010 and Dec 2011), and the St'át'imc Chiefs Council Resolution (October 2010). Further Nations expressed their opposition by signing on to a newspaper advertisement in support of the Coastal First Nations Declaration banning oil tankers. Some Nations have signed multiple declarations; usually only the most recent source is noted below. All Nations listed are affected by these proposed projects based on the broad potential impacts on the coast and to watersheds.
